My comment on the Microsoft Antitrust Settlement:

Microsoft should be broken up into a Desktop OS and Server OS Company. Neither should own an interest in the other. All API should be published and sold for the same price or given away free. Desktop OS Peer to Peer Networking should be limited to file and print. This would create two companies that will have to really innovate and will have to encourage outside 3rd party involvement to survive. If the two new companies are really as good as they claim, they should have no problem continuing to innovate. Presently, everyone else has the same access to the two OSs as they do.
